(b) the principles underlying the necessity for direct recruitment to these cadres ;

(c) why direct recruitment should be resorted to when there are qualified candidates in the department itself ?

Mr. P. Nilakanta Menon.—(a) No.

(b) and (c) No hard and fast rule is followed in the matter. Ordinarily a small percentage of the vacancies in the Station House Officer's grade will be filled up by promotion from the grade of Head Constables provided deserving subordinates with the required qualifications are available.

(c) Direct recruitment to the higher grades is necessary in the interests of efficiency. In all States, the practice exists. It is not a question whether qualifed hands exist or not, but whether the service could be more efficient by the introduction of new blood into the department by means of direct recruitment.
